

Lee study methods.

Lee used 24 heterojunction modules.

Lee measured outdoors over one week.

Lee used a two-wire measurement method.

Lee study results.

Lee reported a temperature coefficient of -0.27 percent per kelvin.

Lee observed temperature drift of approximately 4 degrees Celsius.

Lee study limitations.

The Lee study did not control irradiance.

The Smith and Lee coefficients are not directly interchangeable because technologies and methods differ.